

Abstract

A display apparatus that has a light and thin panel module to be capable of preventing noise. In the display apparatus, the row and source drivers for driving the display panel is controlled by the timing control board which is positioned on main printed circuit board of the notebook computer body. The timing control board is connected with the row and source drivers by the flexible printed circuit film.